

“We were seeking a 3rd party certification exam to supplement our Advanced HACCP training course. By providing an exam tailored to the food processing industry with options for delivery in both English and Spanish, National Registry has given my business a credible and convenient option.” -Tatiana Lorca, Ph.D., Ecolab

Food Safety HACCP Manager

The Food Safety HACCP Manager Certification Exam covers the seven principles of HACCP and measures the level of food safety comprehension essential for workers in facilities such as food manufacturing, processing plants, distribution centers, food packing, and warehouses storing food for human consumption. This exam is a risk mitigation tool to provide evidence that employees are not only trained, but knowledgeable enough to apply what they learned.

Why this exam is important

The FDA Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) was signed into law on January 4, 2011, to better protect public health by ensuring the safety and security of the food supply. This proactive approach allows the FDA to focus on preventing food safety issues as a base for a modern food safety system. FSMA will require a hazard analysis and risk based preventive controls program to evaluate hazards, identify and implement preventative controls to address these hazards, and maintain written plan and documentation. The new preventive control provisions apply to facilities that are required to register with the FDA under the FDA's current food facility registration regulations.

If you choose to use the paper and pencil format, the examination has to be proctored by a "disinterested party." This person cannot be the same person who facilitates, writes, or is knowledgeable about the training.
